Sources for use with Section A.

Source A: From an account by Hugh Hoare, printed in the political magazine National Review, c1888. Hoare was a wealthy man. In 1886, he took over the running of a lodging house in the Whitechapel area. He wanted to understand the problems of the poor. Here he is commenting on the situation in his lodging house.

> At the entrance, there was a little window where the manager sat to collect the four pennies for the night's lodging. He would also sell food to the lodgers.
>
> In the kitchen, about twenty men and women were sitting or standing round the fire. The room had long wooden tables and benches. There was also a cupboard with various cups and saucers for the lodgers to use.
>
> The air in my lodging house sometimes smelt remarkably disgusting. There was a long, low room filled with men. Many of them never washed at all. They never changed their clothes. There was a good deal of smoking, an enormous red-hot fire and all the windows were shut.
>
> Two or three times I was woken up by appalling fights.

Source B: An illustration from St Paul's Magazine, published 1895. The magazine was published monthly in London. It contained various stories, articles and illustrations. This illustration shows a women's sleeping area in a lodging house in the Whitechapel area.
